Our page tried to mimic the process of Googling for a solution. Since we're a web app dealing with memes we felt the need to make this page a bit more fun than the standard Google main page. The three screens above the search bar preview the most popular memes related to the query in the search bar. If the user does not type anything into the search bar, then trending topics will randomly display. This is kind of a way to give users news in meme form. If you click on one of the three screens, then you will be linked the memes page where you will see more information. If the user didn't want to search, but instead wanted to go into his profile, we have the easy to access "My Profile" button.

Future Developments: We plan on using java script to retrieve a list of trending words as well as related gifs.
